

Education for sustainable Development & Human Rights

Evangelische
Hochschule
Nürnberg

4. June 2024
10-11:30
(CET)

Dr. Emmanuel Niyibizi (Ruanda)

Jefferson Plantilla (Japan)

Corrine Tucker (USA)

Prof. Dr. Katrin Valentin (Germany)

Prof. Dr. Martin Nugel (Germany)

Online Panel Discussion

www.evhn.de

What is the discussion about?

Education for sustainable development (ESD) endeavours to achieve greater equity and respect for the planet's limits. What this means and which aspects are particularly emphasised can vary in different countries worldwide. Sometimes, however, the developments and challenges are similar. ESD is intertwined with human rights in various ways. But here too, different aspects take a back seat depending on the nation.

This online event brings together experts who have developed their own expertise across the globe. They will share their perspectives and be available to answer questions. Let's learn from each other!

Who is invited?

The event is aimed at students. Other interested parties are very welcome. It is part of the International Days 2024 at the Lutheran University of Applied Sciences Nuremberg (EVHN).

Education for sustainable Development & Human Rights

Panelists

Dr. Emmanuel Niyibizi is a teacher educator and Director of Research at the Protestant Institute of Arts and Social Sciences (PIASS), Rwanda. He defended his PhD in Foundations of Education at the Bamberg Graduate School of Social Sciences (BAGSS), University of Bamberg, Germany. His research interests include educational quality, inclusive education and global education.

Jefferson R. Plantilla is a Researcher at the Asia-Pacific Human Rights Information Center (HURIGHTS OSAKA) based in Osaka city, Japan. His work focuses on human rights issues in Asia and the Pacific. He also promotes human rights education in the Asia-Pacific region.

Corrine Tucker is the owner of Let Them Learn, an international human rights educational consultancy firm. After many years in global education and receiving another Master's degree in Human Rights, Ms Tucker has now dedicated her career to implementing (mandated) human rights education through workshops, research and training for students and teachers, worldwide.

Prof. Dr. Katrin Valentin is a research professor of education specialising in transformation research at the Lutheran University of Applied Sciences Nuremberg. Her work focuses on education for sustainable development, youth work, school development research and digital education.

Prof. Dr. Martin Nugel is a Professor of Theories, Concepts and Methods of Social Work at the Lutheran University of Nuremberg. His main areas of work include political education, youth work and global learning.

Plus: Dall-E 3 will be a special guest! The imaging AI will give us some comments on our discussion.

Registration

Please send an informal e-mail by 25.5.24 to katrin.valentin@evhn.de Participation is free of charge.

The discussion will take place as a Zoom event.

